Eligible countries are: Bulgaria, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Slovenia, Spain, United Kingdom.

WHAT'S THE AIM?

The overall aim is to introduce the "education through sport" approach to non-formal education, to a wide range of potential practitioners (trainers, facilitators, youth workers - staff working with and for young people, sport coaches) who will integrate it in their activities.

A subsequent aim is to strengthen the international community @ETSMoveandLearn, by engaging new individual members and organizations / institutions, with a long-term commitment.

THE LEARNING OBJECTIVES FOR PARTICIPANTS ARE TO:

- reflect on the role of "education through sport" in relation to formal, non-formal education and sport activities;
- experience "education through sport" activities from the training manual on education through sport and physical activities with young people "Move and learn" and reflect on the adaptation of these to the target group of the partners;
- exchange "education through sport" good practice and inspiring examples between participants;
- build partnerships between the partners;
- integrate the participants in the @ETSMoveandLearn community;
- create an action plan for future international activities using "education through sport".

The issues and needs addressed by the project belong to 4 categories of target groups:

- trainers and facilitators who would like to expand their toolbox with new methodologies and activities, to create more holistic learning experiences for youth workers and young people;
- youth workers who would like to develop their facilitation skills and have new competences in working with young people;
- sport coaches who would like to use sport and physical activity as a learning tool in their activities with young people and youth workers;
- non-integrated youth groups, who could be reached and engaged in their own environments, using sport as a tool for social change.

TRAINING METHODOLOGIES AND METHODS

- The training course will be based on non-formal education and will emphasize the use of education through sport. The approach and methodology will be based on the publication “Move and Learn” Training manual for non-formal Education through Sport and physical activities with young people (available online: <http://www.edusport.info>). This publication was the product of a long term training course for trainers in education through sport supported by the Youth in Action Programme in 2012-2013.
- The whole training programme is designed on the basis of experiential learning. All participants will be involved into the process of learning and the training course will be based on the personal experience of participants including previous experience and collective experience within the group of the participants. Sessions and workshops will involve participants actively using both collective and individual learning situations. Collective and individual reflection will be provided both on daily and on course level in order to conclude learning outcomes and to identify further learning needs.
- The interactive exercises (simulations, group work, role-plays etc.) will be using sport and physical activities therefore we are expected all participants to be involved physically and emotionally.

PARTICIPATION FEE

We require a participation fee of 50 ECO per participant. To calculate this fee, we use Eco rates, which is an alternative currency system designed by European Youth for Action to give people with different living standards equal access to events and subscriptions.
